CHARGES MURDER

The trial of Oller John Wynne, charged with the murder of Archibald McKinnon, the third assistant engineer of the steamer Rosecrans, was commenced this morning before Judge Dole. The selection of the jury took two full days and this morning there was only one witness placed on the stand, James Reid, the second officer of the Rosecrans at the time the crime was committed. The examination was conducted very slowly and no information of importance was elicited from him during the morning session.
In his address to the jury, telling them what he expected to show, Deputy U. S. District Attorney W. T. Rawlins made a statement that he would show that Wynne, on the morning of the night on which the murder was committed, came ashore and later returned to his ship where he did some work. He then came ashore and in a certain saloon in the city had a conversation with the first assistant engineer, after which he returned to the steamer at about 8 p. m. About the same time, McKinnon, who had also been ashore, returned to the ship and was seen in his room by two witnesses. Wynne was also seen in his room apparently smoking. Shortly after this two of the members of the ship's crew heard trouble in McKinnon's room and, rushing to that place, found Wynne immediately outside the door saying: "I've killed the fellow and I'm glad of it."
McKinnon was lying on a settee, with his head broken in by a hammer and one eye knocked out from a blow of the same weapon. Rawlins stated that then he had been taken on deck and sent to the Queen's Hospital where he died.
Reid, when placed on the stand spent most of the morning in describing the location of the rooms on the ship, there being no diagram at hand by which this could be illustrated to the jury.
The defendant, Wynne, is a man of medium size, with a yellow mustache. He is apparently of a rather low type, having a sloping forehead with runs back at about the same angle to the back of his head, which is rather bullet shaped. He does not appear to take a great amount of interest in the trial, relying on the ability of his attorney, F. E. Thompson, to get him through. It is evident that the case will last for over two weeks before a verdict is arrived at.

REILLY ANSWERS UNFAIR CRITICS

Charlie Reilly, whose boxing has entertained Honolulu, answers his unfair critics as follows:
"I am not making enough money here and I cannot stay to fight Frankie Smith. I came here on my own account and nobody has any strings on me. I don't owe anybody a cent and the promoters have no right to ask me to stay if I don't make money enough. I have made only enough to pay expenses since I have been here and I can make more than that in six-round goes on the Coast. I would like to stay and give the public one more show, but I can't stay for the money they offer. I don't think that the newspapers or promoters should expect me to stay when they don't pay enough. I never got anything from Joe Cohen only what I worked for and I worked hard for the $130 I received for my 15-round go with Lahey. I would not fight for a month any way when I was training for Lahey. I was sick for a week and would not train and I am not feeling very good now. I need a rest for at least one month. I am not afraid of Smith or any other man in the country at my weight."
CHARLES REILLY.

NO DEMONSTRATION TOMORROW

There will be no demonstration tomorrow, as the demonstrator will sail on Wednesday's Alameda for the Coast. She may be seen all day tomorrow, however, at Henry May & Co.'s store, where she will be pleased to answer all questions about the Van Duzer Co.'s flavoring extracts, and flavoring in general. The demonstrations have been a complete success, and everyone who attended was convinced of the superiority of the Van Duzer extracts.

3 DAYS MAIL

T. K. K. S. S. America Maru this morning arrived from San Francisco with mail three days later than that brought by the Alameda last Friday, representing the accumulation of October 18, 19 and 20.
She was late on account of rough weather off the Coast and being heavier laden than usual. She sails for the Orient at 5 o'clock this afternoon.
There is but one stop-over passenger for Honolulu, Philip de Angellis, an asphalt magnate. In the cabin are 65 for Orient ports and 100 Japanese in the steerage.
Among the first class passengers are three distinguished physicians who are returning home from attending a medical convention. They are Dr. Y. Suto, Dr. N. Kusumoto and Dr. Y. Kon.
A large quantity of the America Maru's cargo is made up of Army stores and much small arm ammunition for Manila. A thousand bales of cotton are aboard for Japan.
The steamships China and Manchuria were passed by the America Maru. On Thursday last the America Maru,

BONINE VIEWS MOST WONDERFUL

Bonine's moving pictures at the Opera House Saturday night were a wonderful revelation. No such representation of the volcano has ever before been given. The daylight picture of a stream of lava in the crater was especially realistic, and could only have been obtained at great effort. The night picture gave a weird impression of the moving fire. The views of a large party, on their way from the Volcano House to the crater, were wonderful.
Other pictures were the funeral of the late Prince David, many island scenes and some comic shows, making up an unusually fine exhibition. The House was sold out ahead, and the show ought to be given again. Bonine has even improved upon the pictures he gave before, as far as professional work is concerned.
